

Fair or not fair?

The historical apportionment of the House of Representatives in the United States is intriguing, as individuals from various states were keen to safeguard their own interests within the House. In this project, student is tasked with examining various apportionment methods and uncovering the mathematical principles that underlie them.